Penn State will present 'Sojourner'

The Pennsylvania State University's Worthington-Sermon-Carson Art and Lecture Series Committee will present a theatrical performance by the Germantown Theatre Guild entitled "Sojourner" on Wednesday, Oct. 7, 8 p.m. in the Study Learning Center at the Duquesne Campus.

"Sojourner" is the story of Sojourner Truth. She was born a slave named Isabella in New York State in 1799. At the age of 9 she was sold away from her parents. She was passed from cruel master to a slave owner to a wealthy farmer who bought her for $300.

In 1828 she ran away from his household, found shelter with gentle Quakers who bought her freedom. After being set free, Isabella changed her name to Sojourner.

Truth and set out to change her world. She followed an "Inner Voice" that sprang from a belief in God learned at her mother's knee. She was a legendary great-mother leader whose vision of human rights, more than a hundred years ago, included freedom for slaves and equality for women.

Sojourner Truth was chosen a dramatic subject when the Germantown Theatre Guild, one of the oldest small theaters in the state of Pennsylvania, wanted to present a historically significant woman. In its audience, the story of this woman's life is a story of the American dream.

The play, written for the Germantown Theatre Guild under a grant from the Pennsylvania Council on the Arts, is a historical perspective is considered to be accurate, with many of Sojourner's speeches taken directly from her own journal words reflecting her tremendous wit and wisdom. The play has a double-pronged cultural thrust: to enlighten theater and to open the door to black history.

"Sojourner" cost of $45 has been covered by the state since January. Audience response has been tremendous, according to Katherine Minchard, who conceived and directed the play.

The performance is open to the general public. Admission is $2.00 by Art and Lecture Series. Advance tickets are $1.00. Tickets for the play are available at the Germantown Theatre Guild, one of the oldest small theaters in the state of Pennsylvania.

At Pocono Downs ... Dutch Hill Chief is special

Dutch Hill Chief has only gotten to the races six times in the last two years. He won but once.

However, that one win, a 2001 romp at Pocono Downs, was enough to mark this 4-year-old son of Northern Dancer something special.

Enough to cause speculation as to just how good the pacer might be if he were sound.

If you only get to the races six times in two years, you are ailing something.
